五、閱讀測驗

Everyone knows what Post-it Notes are: They are those great little self-stick notepapers. Most people have them, use them, and love them. But Post-it Notes were not a planned product.

No one got the idea and then stayed up nights to invent it. A man named Spencer Silver was working in the 3M research labs in 1970 trying to find a strong adhesive. An adhesive is something such as glue that people use to stick two things together. Silver developed a new adhesive, but it was even weaker than what 3M already made. It stuck to objects, but could easily be lifted off. It was super weak instead of super strong.

Although the stuff seemed a failure, Silver didn't throw it away. Then one Sunday four years later, another 3M scientist named Arthur Fry was singing in the church's choir. He used markers to keep his place in the hymnal, but they kept falling out of the book. Remembering Silver's adhesive, Fry put some on his markers. Success! With the weak adhesive, the markers stayed in place, yet lifted off without damaging the pages. 3M began selling Post-it Notes all over the country in 1980-ten years after Silver developed the super weak adhesive. Today they remain one of the most popular office products available.
