	I have referred in passin	ng to the difficult tasks assu	med by the Greek Archaeol	ogical Service, and I hope that it will not s	eem too presumptuous i	f I further enlarge on them.	The unselective preservation	of Greece's material heritage, which is a	cause so estimable in pr	inciple that almost nobody	would speak in public agair	st it, has brought about another, less obvi	ous, crisis. The historic	ally conscious visitors to G	reece today are rightly imp	pressed by the steady increase in the num	ber of local museums a	nd in the quality of exhibiti	on. What they may not app	preciate—and I think that this is true even	of classicists and other	"professionals" who are no	t archaeologists—is that wh	at is actually displayed is merely the beau	tiful tip of an unsightly	iceberg. Almost every muse	eum in Greece is compelled	to conceal in its storerooms a mass, grow	ing year by year at an a	larming pace, of materials u	nsuited to exhibition; these	artifacts are often undocumented and some	etimes destined to remain	n so.
	If the Archaeological S	Service were rewarded, eith	er in salaries or in manpow	ver, on a scale that bears some faint

These days, clubs are not just loud; they are organ-shuffling. An occupational audiologist once described her experience of standing at the back of a busy night club in the downtown area as being punched in the chest. Another news reporter complained that the thumping club music made his stomach churn.

What is changed is that far more establishments have shifted to foreground music as opposed to background.

44 The noise level on the dance floor of most clubs is well into 100 decibels—the noise level you would expect from a power saw or loud outboard motor.

The industrial-strength vibration that gives you that sought-after "upbeat" feeling is stressful for the body, which reacts to loud noise as to danger—it gets the adrenaline flowing and the heart pumping. 45

46 But opponents say that enforcing maximum interior noise levels of 90 decibels or under will drive patrons to illegal venues.

Not long ago, bar owners were worrying that customers would stay away in droves if smoking was banned. In fact, it is non-smokers who were staying away, fed up with sucking in clouds of second-hand smoke. __47__

- 44 (A)One possible method is through devices that flash amber once the noise approaches a set level.
 - (B) Management believes the music creates an "upbeat" atmosphere.
 - (C)In other words, it is hard to find a place to go where the music is not intrusively loud.
 - (D) At noise levels exceeding 90 decibels, even the best construction cannot keep the sound of pounding bass inside.
- 45 (A) At noise levels exceeding 90 decibels, even the best construction cannot keep the sound of pounding bass inside.
 - (B)One possible method is through devices that flash amber once the noise approaches a set level.
 - (C)In other words, it is hard to find a place to go where the music is not intrusively loud.
 - (D)Over time, it results in stress and fatigue, not to mention hearing damage.
- 46 (A) At noise levels exceeding 90 decibels, even the best construction cannot keep the sound of pounding bass inside.
 - (B) Some suggest that new restrictions on clubs be imposed to keep indoor noise levels to 90 decibels and avoid annoying neighbors.
 - (C)One possible method is through devices that flash amber once the noise approaches a set level.
 - (D) Who knows how many people are similarly avoiding clubs and bars because they are fed up with yelling at each other to be heard?
- 47 (A)One possible method is through devices that flash amber once the noise approaches a set level.
 - (B) Who knows how many people are similarly avoiding clubs and bars because they are fed up with yelling at each other to be heard?
 - (C) At noise levels exceeding 90 decibels, even the best construction cannot keep the sound of pounding bass inside.
 - (D) Who knows how many people are similarly avoiding these places because they are fed up with waking up with reeking clothes?

Trying to map the brain has always been cartography for fools. Most of the other parts of the body reveal their workings with little more than a glance. 48 The lungs are clearly bellows; the stomach, technically, a grinder. 49 The 1.4-kg lump of wrinkled tissue apparently has no moving parts. 50 However, it not only serves as the motherboard for all the body's other systems but also is the seat of your mind, your thoughts, your sense that you exist at all.

- 48 (A) You have your limbs.
 - (B) Nor does it have joints or valves.
 - (C) The heart is self-evidently a pump.
 - (D) The mystery of consciousness requires careful study.
- 49 (A) Some maintain that solving the problem of consciousness is controversial.
 - (B) But the brain, which does more than any other organ, reveals least of all.
 - (C) The mystery of consciousness requires careful study.
 - (D) The heart is self-evidently a pump.
- 50 (A) Nor does it have joints or valves.
 - (B) The heart is self-evidently a pump.
