四、閱讀測驗【請在下列各題中選出最適當的答案】

第一篇：

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, the government advocated a “later, longer, fewer” lifestyle, encouraging people to marry later, have wider gaps between children and fewer children overall. It also set up the controversial one-child policy. These were attempts to curb population growth in order to help modernize the economy.

Chinese women are having fewer children, but having a smaller generation following a boom generation—and longer life expectancies—means that by 2050, for every 100 people aged 20-64, there will be 45 people aged over 65, compared with about 15 today.

China’s fertility rate—the average number of children a woman has in their lifetime—is 1.6, which is lower than the rate in the UK and the US.

The Chinese government believes the one-child policy curtailed population growth, and that it prevented 400 million extra births. Yet a population expert’s findings suggest that China’s fertility would have declined at a similar rate without the one-child policy and would continue to decline even if the policy was discarded. One explanation could be that the policy caused anxiety among the population, which prompted many to have children at an earlier time. And there was a decline in age at first marriage and age at first childbearing in the 1980s.

Since 2013, there has been a gradual relaxation of China’s family planning laws that already allowed minority ethnic families and rural couples whose firstborn was a girl to have more than one child. In 2015, China officially announced that all couples are allowed to have two children to balance population development and address the challenge of an aging society. But human rights groups said if China is serious about respecting human rights, the government should immediately end such invasive and punitive controls over people’s decisions to plan families and have children.

- 【2】41. According to the article, what does “longer” in the first line refer to?
① To have longer life expectancy. ② To wait a longer time to have another child.
③ To eat healthy to enjoy longer life. ④ To curb population growth for a longer time.
- 【2】42. According to the article, what does the population expert predict about the birth rate if there hadn’t been one-child policy?
① It would have increased. ② It would have dropped.
③ It would have increased first then dropped. ④ It would have dropped first then increased.
- 【2】43. According to the article, what was the main reason for one-child policy?
① Air pollution. ② Economy.
③ Educational qualities. ④ Technical development.
- 【3】44. According to the article, what modification has the Chinese government made about its one-child policy since 2015?
① Minority ethnic couples with two girls can have one more child.
② Rural couples can have as many children as they like.
③ All couples may have two children.
④ Urban couples with a daughter are allowed to have two more children.
- 【3】45. Which of the following statements about China in 1980s is true?
① People got married later. ② People had their first child later.
③ People were anxious about the one-child policy. ④ People had confidence in the one-child policy.

The upcoming revival of Nokia-branded smartphones will include a 5-inch screen model with a high-end camera and one of Qualcomm’s fastest chips for a price of only $150, according to the latest rumors.

That a Nokia phone is even the subject of rumors again is testament to the resiliency of the brand, which once ruled the mobile phone market before falling on hard times. Finnish startup HMD Global, run by former Nokia executives, bought the rights to revive the brand this year and has said it is coming out with new smartphones in 2017.

The new phone may be called the Nokia P and come in two models with 5-inch and 5.5 inch screen options. The smaller model will sell for $150 and the larger model for around $200.

The market for less-expensive smartphones is sharply competitive, with models from Samsung, Huawei, and Oppo leading the way. The phones are most popular in some of the fastest growing phone markets, such as India, where a typical Apple iPhone may be priced out of the reach of most customers.

It is not known yet if the upcoming phones will be sold in the United States. Last week, HMD announced a $26 feature phone that will be sold initially in the Middle East, India, Asia-Pacific, Africa, and Europe starting next year.

Nokia was the largest phone seller on the planet for more than a decade starting in 1998. But in the face of surging competition from Apple, Blackberry, Samsung, and others, it slid into obscurity. Microsoft bought what was left of Nokia’s shrinking phone business in 2014 and still sells smart phones under its own Lumia brand. Nokia itself now focuses on selling telecom network equipment.

- 【4】46. According the passage, which of the following statements about HMD Global is NOT true?
