請依下文回答第 21 題至第 25 題：

For almost 60 years, the predator-prey relationship between wolves and moose on Isle Royale, a small island in the northwest part of Lake Superior in Michigan, US, has been the focus of ongoing research. In recent years, however, the number of wolves on the island has 21 due to inbreeding; there now remain only two individuals—one male and one female—on the 200-square-mile island. This has led to 22 growth of the island's moose herds, which graze extensively in the national park's surrounding forest. The situation has 23 debate about whether to attempt a genetic rescue of the wolf population or 24 any intervention and allow extinction. On September 22, the US National Park Service (NPS) announced its decision to 25 the wolf population. By the end of October, six wolves from Michigan and Minnesota will be airlifted to Isle Royale by the NPS.

請依下文回答第26題至第30題：

How can you cope better with stress? How do you feel when bad things happen? Do you bounce back from 26 or sob indefinitely? Emotional resilience, the ability that some people have to 27 stress, was once thought to be a genetic gift. You were either lucky and had it, or you didn't and struggled. Studies show that teenagers who fail exams have an 28 risk of depression as adults, as athletes who lose can feel long-term guilt and humiliation. But recent psychological research suggests that emotional resilience can be developed.

The study found that having higher levels of self-esteem, a more positive way of explaining why things happen, and avoiding perfectionist thinking were strongly linked to bouncing back when things go wrong.

How you explain things also matters: if you attribute personal success to 29 rather than your own work and talent, then you are less able to use success to boost your self-esteem. If, however, you can 30 a disappointment by attributing it to external factors, such as not getting a job because they wanted a different skill mix, then you have the equivalent of emotional armor.

Humanity is set to enter a new era of transport as a flying car could go on sale next year. The flying vehicle, BlackFly, has been recently 36 in California. The creator of BlackFly is a startup company named Opener, funded by the famous Google co-founder Larry Page. BlackFly's designers say it can travel for up to 25 miles (40km). It will eventually cost the same as a typical sports-utility car. The vehicle has been tested in Canada, which has 37 its use. Even though it will take to the skies, drivers will not need a pilot's 38 to get behind the controls. However, BlackFly operators will have to successfully complete a pilot's written examination and receive training in how to use the vehicle. The vehicle can only carry one person and is powered by eight 39 – four at the front of the car and four at the back. It works best, Opener says, when taking off and landing from grassy surfaces. Opener joins a long list of companies 40 the ultimate science fiction dream of a flying car. Thanks to rapid improvements in drone capabilities, that future seems closer than ever.
